

S-
-tar-
-fruit
they have 50 of them; we have five. We could not decide whether or not to go The Full Moonty so we just threw in a slice; our banner's not star-spangled enough – so to create the glitter we drew in the lion with the golden mane to create mystique, gave it a fishtail and that's how the fake myth of the lionfish came about, caught in a key chain sold for a dollar; culture is cheap to make, to buy, to shake in a sling, it's an import worth your stopovers; take our money and our women please. We're no longer a colony but still second best in the world. After all the star's still yellow.